A Recent Media Article Includes a discussion on how on judge may have offered President Donald J Trump's aggressive deportation initiative can skirt due process. "We, the American People" might look at such an idea as challenging due process merit. Either due process is to be carried out, or, it's not to be carried out. Or, due process might fall under a notion rules are made to be broken. Some.

Politicians-Legislators Are Adept at coming up with arguments to get around constraints – any constraints, including law or Constitutionality – keeping politicians-legislators from getting their way. It wouldn't hurt for "Us, the American People" to have firmly in mind whether politicians-legislators are to get around due process, or, politicians-legislators are to tow due process mark save dire crisis.

President Donald J. Trump's Aggressive deportation measure, without doubt, is seen by some as urgent beyond urgent, by others as completely unnecessary, by others as OK, but only with due process. Missing is whether Americans have latitude to keep themselves free from undue danger whilst America's government rums gamut of established procedures for dealing with alleged public threats.

Face it! All your communist ideas are bad for the USA

“Our, the American People’s” Attorney General Pam Bondi is, reportedly, calling for three D.C. judges to be removed. Reason is judges in question can’t be fair. Meaning, said judges can’t be objective, meaning, can’t be neutral, unbiased, disinterested. No judge ruling lucid with pertinent law is not objective. Law is not objective. Law always makes someone a winner, someone a loser. Biased.

"The inescapable price of liberty is an ability to preserve it from destruction."
 ~ Douglas MacArthur

"We, the American People." If we are to go along with magistrate removal, would be smart to base magistrate removal on whether a judge issued findings consistent with public opinion. Public opinion mya not be neutral, unbiased, just, fair, etc., but public opinion ias as reliable as people in black robes making decisions based on their personal attitudes, values, and beliefs (PAVB). PAVB are error prone.

"Our government has kept us in a perpetual state of fear - kept us in a continuous stampede of patriotic fervor - with the cry of grave national emergency. Always there has been some terrible evil at home or some monstrous foreign power that was going to gobble us up if we did not blindly rally behind it."

Public Opinion Is, Admittedly, No Less biased than would be any magistrate ruling on any case. It would be more than utterly naïve for "Us, the American People" to expect unprejudicial opinions from judges, including Supreme Court of the United States (SCOPTUS) Justices. Judges, including SCOTUS Justices, base their rulings on how they interpret evidence, dusted with judicial precedence.

We are not the same!

We Can't Expect Judges To Try Cases based on Constitutionality. Constitutionality, like law, is subject to interpretation. Moreover, America's courts, as cases weave their way through our appeals court system, are not universally ruled. Courts have no indisputable, axiomatic criteria to refer to when deciding cases. Where there objectivity, standards-wise, courts, SCOTUS not least, would not split.\

"Our, the American People's" media has an article in circulation on differing ideas held by Supreme Court of the United States (SCOTUS) Justices regarding federal requirement for communications companies to provide ". . . rapid, efficient, nationwide, and worldwide wire and radio communication service with adequate facilities at reasonable charges." Deliberation is over how service is to be paid.

"We, the American People," one way or other, end up paying for all requirements America's legislators write into law. References referenced accurate, government consumes between 19 and 20 percent of America's GDP. One in five productivity dollars goes to fund government. Even so, legislators – some, in any case, are upset because they claim some Americans are not taxed enough.

Article On SCOTUS Deliberating federal communications requirements points out SCOTUS Justices focuses on Justices being at odds on how communications companies ought be obligated to fund communications services to economically disadvantaged areas. Why government would be obligated to, say, install power lines to a single house three miles into mountainous territory is a little bizarre.

If "We, the American People" expect government employees and elected officials to do their jobs as we expect, then we must (1) task them with responsibility, (2) extend them authority to do their jobs, and, (3) hold them accountable, with consequences, for not meeting job requirements. President Donald J. Trump's agency firings, based on media coverage, reveal debatable presidential firing power.

"The Internal Revenue service is not asking anybody to do anything. It confiscates your assets and puts you behind bars if you don't pay."

Media Report A Judicial Finding on a case brought by government employee watchdogs let go by presidential order has it judge in question, while says there was little to be do with respect to reinstatement, indicated firings in question were likely violation of law. One has to wonder how, if law was broken, why there would not be a reinstatement remedy. Case exemplifies lack of clarity.

“Our, the American People’s” governmental system is, whether we like it or not, rife with political bias. Avoiding bias is nigh impossible when elected officials have power to place key people in government positions based on those people performing to further ideology made policy by virtue of positional authority. Supreme court of the United States (SCOTUS) justices are politically seated.

Unelected Government Officials are supposed to be completely neutral, fair, and unbiased in any way as relates to job performance. It ought be patently obvious to “Us, the American People” elected officials are installed based on voter preference, arguably far from unbiased. It is too much to expect job holders to cast off their preferential bias simply because their job is supposed to be done fairly.
